Optional

• If one-way box is ticked all return flight areas will disappear. Tick one-way if not returning

A hand-drawn wireframe of a flight search interface, similar to the one above. The 'language' dropdown is now set to 'ENG' and the 'LOGGED IN' button is present. The 'Outbound' and 'Inbound' sections are present but the 'Inbound' section is mostly empty. The 'One-Way' checkbox is now checked with a red mark. The 'Passengers' input field is present. The 'Search flights' button is at the bottom left.

Macbook Pro

- The outbound departing airport will be nearest airport as default.
- Onward airport = start typing the name of airport. A highlighted part will be shown and drop-down menu with choices will be shown.

6

- To choose a date of departure a pop-up menu with the calendar will be visible. Check on the correct date of your choosing.

7

- Pop-up calendar will at default change to returning date. Choose date.
- Optional. Click on "flexible dates" to show more dates of flights.
